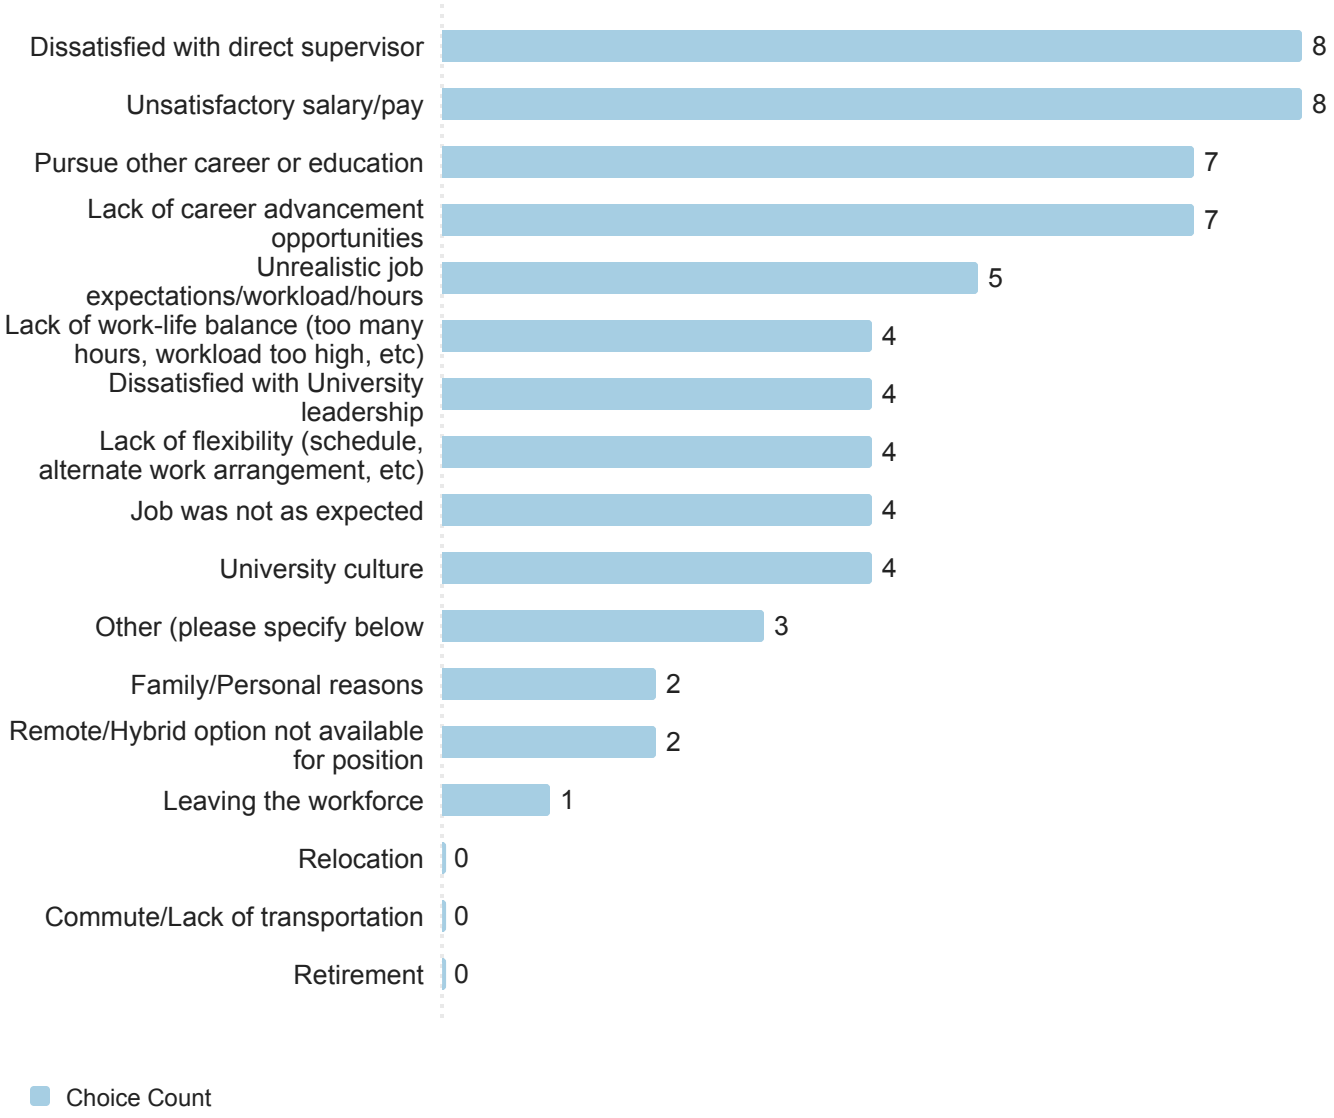
Being harassed by dept. chair.

Couple different reasons

I would like to select many reasons - dissatisfied with direct supervisor, lack of flexibility, dissatisfied with university leadership, lack of work-life balance, unrealistic job expectations/workload/hours, university culture, job was not as expected,

Q9 - Please share any other reason(s) for leaving Creighton (select all that apply):



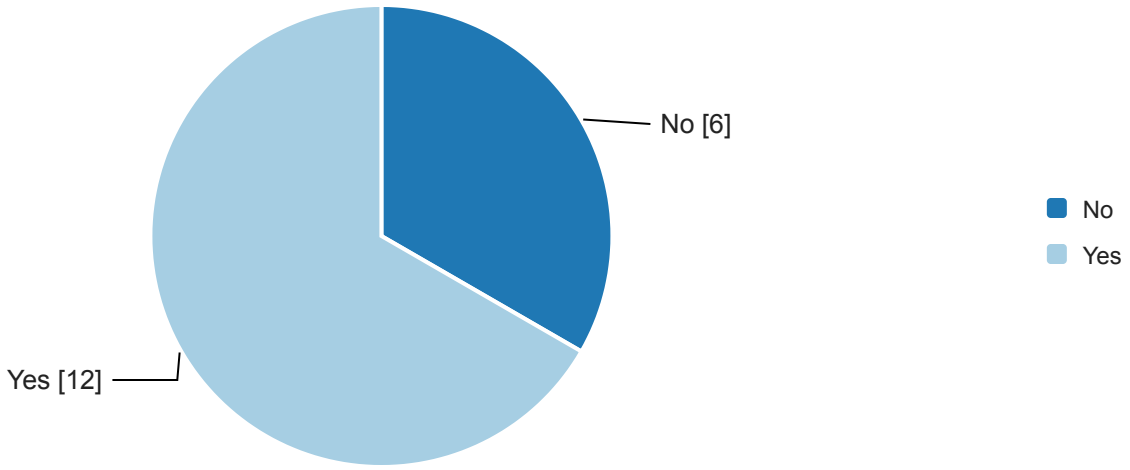
---Q8 - Responses to Other below

We are always short staffed and I was made to do the job of 3 people at times with no compensation or even appreciation.

Hostile work environment created by my dept. chair.

Retirement is the only reason I am leaving the University. It is time for my wife and I to enter the next phase of our lives.

Q10 - Were you given the tools, resources and work environment to be successful here?



Q10 - If you answered "no" to the question above, what could have been improved to make it better?

If you answered "no" to the question above, what could have been improved to make it better?

Communication is lacking in all areas.

Some acknowledgement and communication from the administration. Instead, I was told if I had a problem with my chair I could speak with Title IX.

Even after requesting numerous times, I did not have access to my budget for 1.5 years; part of the job is to manage and project accommodation costs and I did not have the tools to be able to do this. I requested from Joe, supervisor, numerous times on how to to get access- he never followed up until it became a division wide goal to have all Directors have access to their budgets (new Directors were onboarding). I and other staff in SAS requests a new platform (Accommodate) for tracking and implementing accommodations- I met with Accommodate sales at least 4 times- each time I would get a different answer from Joe and Wayne why we were not moving forward - The current system crashes daily, student files go missing, faculty and students are upset on how slow the program is, reports are not accurate, etc. It creates more work than a system to decrease the amount of work. Staffing- there has historically been a high turnover in SAS- when staff would leave, there was not additional support to fill the gap of the lost position. The SAS office is not conducive to hold multiple meetings at the same time and have accommodated testing overflow. 2 FTE are in cubicals that also is the testing overflow - it would decrease the ability to work effectively.

There is a system we use called clockwork that is outdated and hard to use. There is another option for system use called accommodate that would improve so much of the negative parts of the job such as negative conversations with students, families, and faculty.

When I was first hired by Julie Nelson in August 2023, the leadership in GME and Internal Medicine was great. Once she retired in April 2024, GME changed the structure of leadership within GME and the programs, shifting all coordinators to land under one Manager. The new manager has struggled with leading and guidance during that time. Another coordinator was hired for the third position in Internal Medicine and the responsibility of training her landed on me - even though I was not her manager. I was not paid for the training and guidance that I gave to the new employee, and even after vocalizing to GME that our program needed support, none was given. Our program has had a great deal of changes over the past few months with Julie's retirement and our Program Director stepping down at the end of August, and a new one taking the role. GME has not checked in with the program or our new Program Director. They have not guided any of us in our new roles. I stepped into Julie's role as the Program Manager without the title change or the pay - that is unfair. I feel as though Creighton and GME used me and my work ethic to keep the program running. I applied for Julie's position after she left and was told that I did not have enough years experience, and would need at least 5 years of experience to even be considered. I am not someone right out of high school or college. I have a Bachelors degree, 14 years experience teaching, own 3 businesses with my husband, and was (through Creighton) working on my Masters degree. I was already doing Julie's job even before being interviewed, but no recognition whatsoever. It was not until I put in my resignation, that that SAME day, my manager, Stef Keator, came to me and said I was going to be getting a (very minimal) raise. I had been asking for 3 months at that point for a raise considering the training I was giving to our new coordinator (who left after two months due to low pay and unfair treatment from our manager). There was no onboarding for our new coordinator and no onboarding for our new Program Director.

I have thoroughly enjoyed my time in the Internal Medicine program and working with the physicians who are in the leadership roles. I have also enjoyed my time with our residents. I did not want to leave this job but with the lack of pay and the increased responsibilities that were put on me in an unfair way, I did not see any other option. Internal Medicine is a great program to work in and I was lucky to land there, however, there needs to be a deep look into GME and how things are being run. GME is a cliquey group and does not make the coordinators feel welcomed. They have a reputation to them as though they think they are better than the coordinators. The way they talk to and treat the coordinators is unprofessional, and it's not a work environment that anyone wants to work in.

I really hope that the message that I am putting across is for HR to look into how GME is run, who is running GME, and what needs to change. If not, they are going to be losing a lot of other great and competent coordinators.

If you'd like to speak further on any of these points, I'd be happy to discuss.

In Student Accessibility Services I started here in October 2023. I didn't have a computer monitor for 6 months of my job and had to take my coworker's computer monitor when she left in April 2024. I never received a keyboard, and I had back issues and needed a good supportive desk chair. I requested a desk chair from my supervisor in October 2022 and didn't receive one until March 2023. I had to figure out how to get my work computer on my own as well. I didn't receive any training for my job other than 2 weeks from my supervisor and was never allowed additional training opportunities, however when my new colleagues started in July 2023 both had the opportunity to attend the AHEAD training that was virtual for a certificate.

In March or April 2023, I was asked by my boss to put together a proposal for requesting for training opportunities. I was informed that they wanted to send our boss to the training as she had yet to be to a training but has 15 years of experience in this field. I was then informed I could start a training certificate program that was funded by a doner on Neurodivergent classes. This program the classes I learn strategies I would never use in my current position. The course I just finished taking I was too advanced for it as it is things you should know/learn right away in my SAS role. I was also told I could work on the homework during the workday as it was something required for my job. My boss would see that I had set aside time on my calendar, and she would purposely schedule meetings over it at that time making me take my personal time outside of work to complete the courses.

If answering "very dissatisfied/dissatisfied/somewhat dissatisfied" in any of the categories in the question above, please share further information or suggestions for improvement.

There is no mentorship in the dental school for young/new faculty. It is based off of favoritism.

As an Administrative Assistant, there were not many chances for career advancement in my department.

Only people to recognize anything was Students, Dentists, and Dean Wallen

I try to apply for higher positions, that were still at the dental school. They denied it, anyway they could keep me at the front desk they would.

Based on the current way this role is positioned, a lot of responsibility and pressure is placed on the individual who holds this role. However, it is very clear that there is minimal opportunities for career advancement through this position. There is no direct career path outside of serving as a project management.

I came to Creighton planning to utilize tuition remission to help further my career goals, but in reality, as an hourly employee, the opportunity to take classes is very limited.

Make time to follow through with performance meetings even if there are major holidays to work around.

I would be up for a promotion in one year, but am more interested in new responsibilities/tasks, whereas the promotion would be in title and pay only.

They require a minimum of 5 years of experience to move up to a manager position (even though I was doing the work of a manager after 8 months).

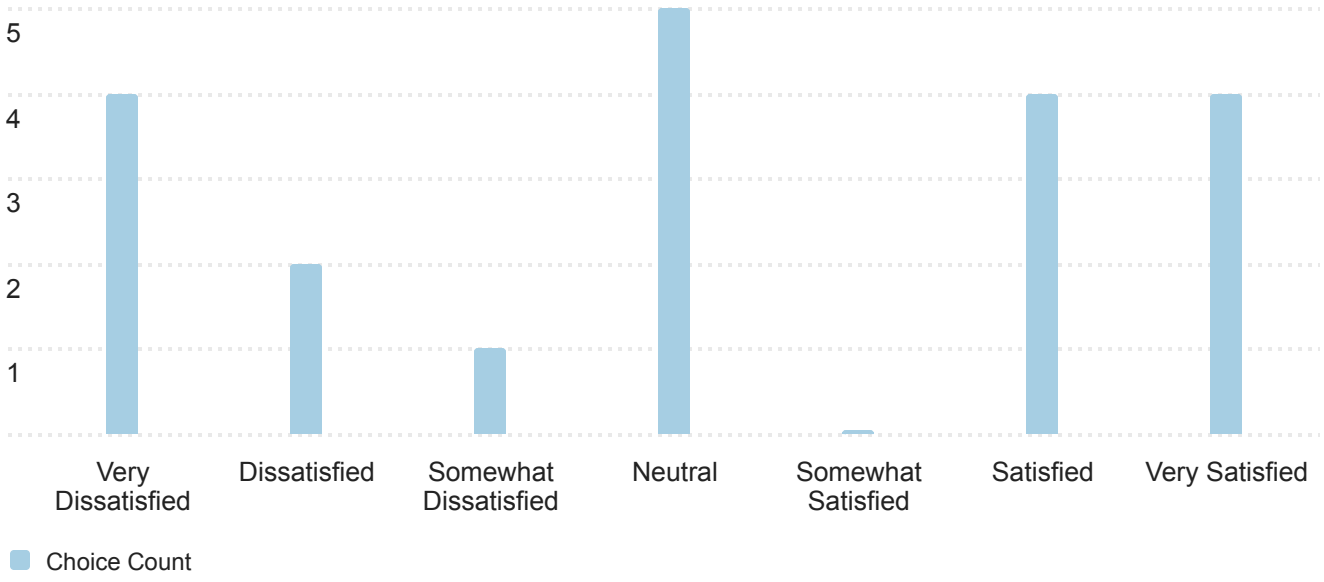
When I transitioned from CARS to SAS I was working two jobs. The only training I received was 2 weeks shadowing my boss and then I was thrown in to figure it out. Working in a compliance office I was not prepared for taking on intake that early and had to figure it out as I went.

In CARS my boss Katie Larson was very supportive and would give recognition to her staff for things they completed. I still to this day get shout outs for things I contributed during my time in that office. HOWEVER, in my current role in SAS we do not get recognition. Our Director Anne Heimann took us (Maddie and me) to a meeting the entire time she talked about all the things she did, but never gave credit to her staff and we assisted in the process. During our SAS retreat in October Joe Ecklund came into the retreat talking about the high turnover rate in our office. He also shared how it doesn't matter if faculty, staff or students treat the SAS team poorly we just have to deal with it. This is not ok, we should not have to take getting yelled at by faculty, staff or students in our office.

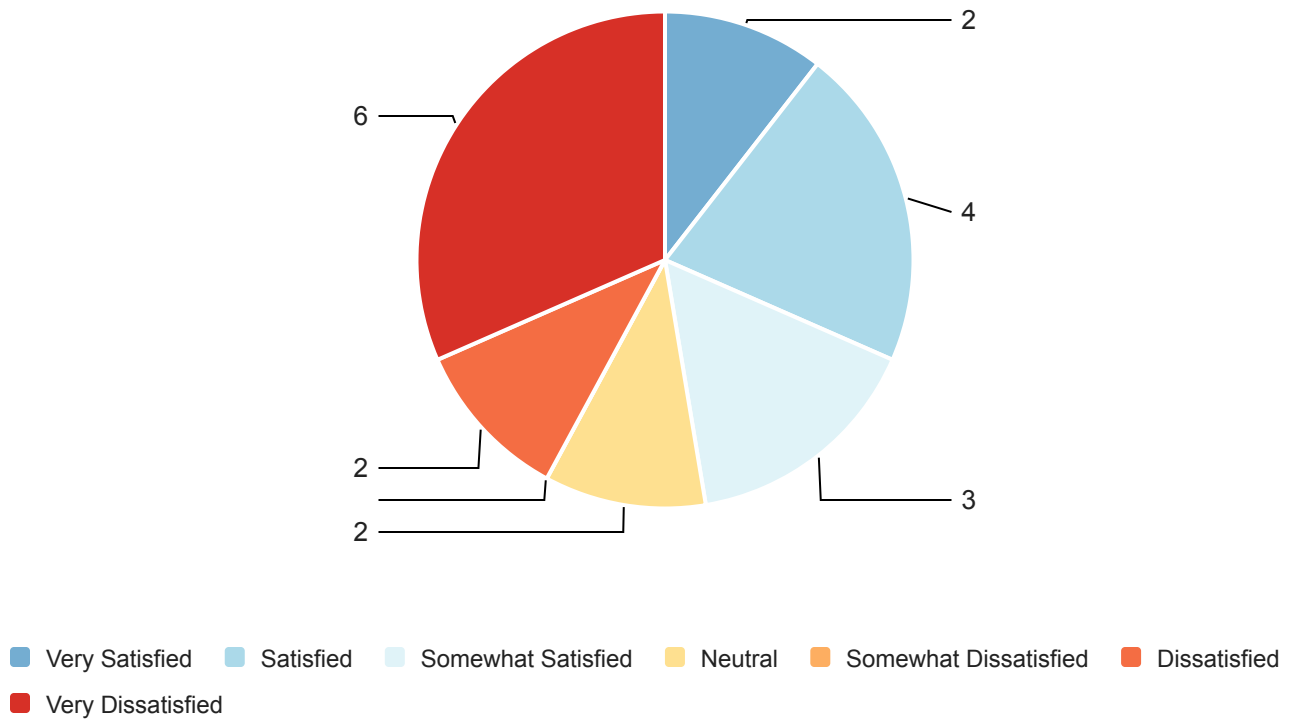
As the Assoicate Director in SAS I'm at the highest place I can go in our office and there is no room for advancement. Yes, I did receive a larger portion for a salary increase this year but hearing that the Assistant Director in AZ makes more than I do as the Associate Director is also not acceptable and the cost of living is actually more here in Omaha than where he is. The salary scale needs to be fixed at Creighton.

The Leadership in the Student Success Division is terrible. During my time at Creighton my boss in SAS was very rude and it was a very hostile work environment. I went to Joe Ecklund in July to let him know of the situations, and nothing was ever done.

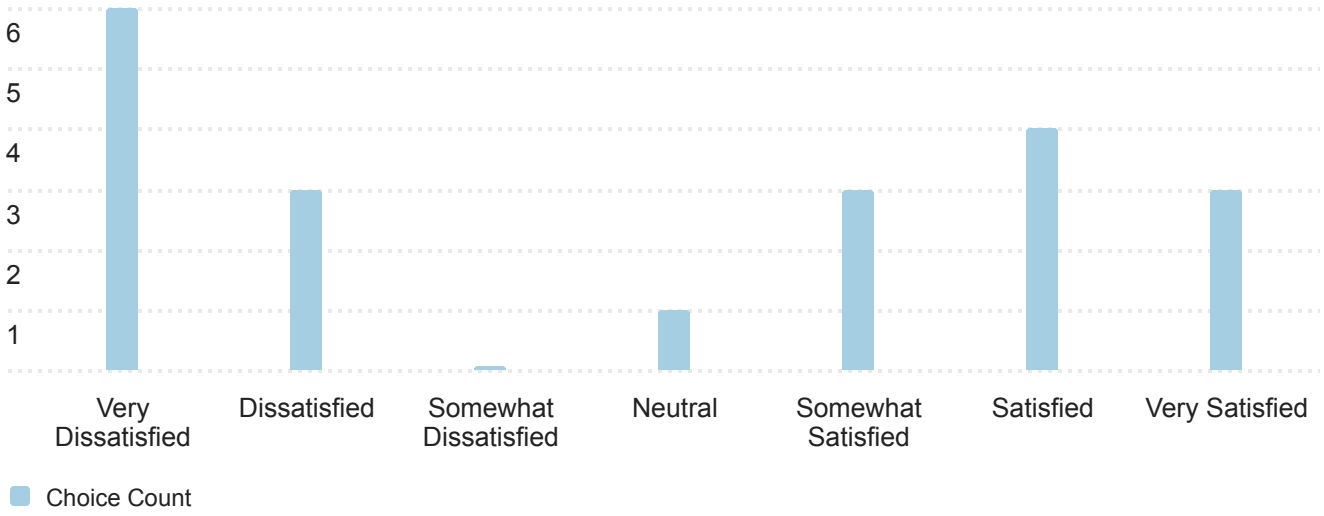
Q13_1 - Understands your career goals



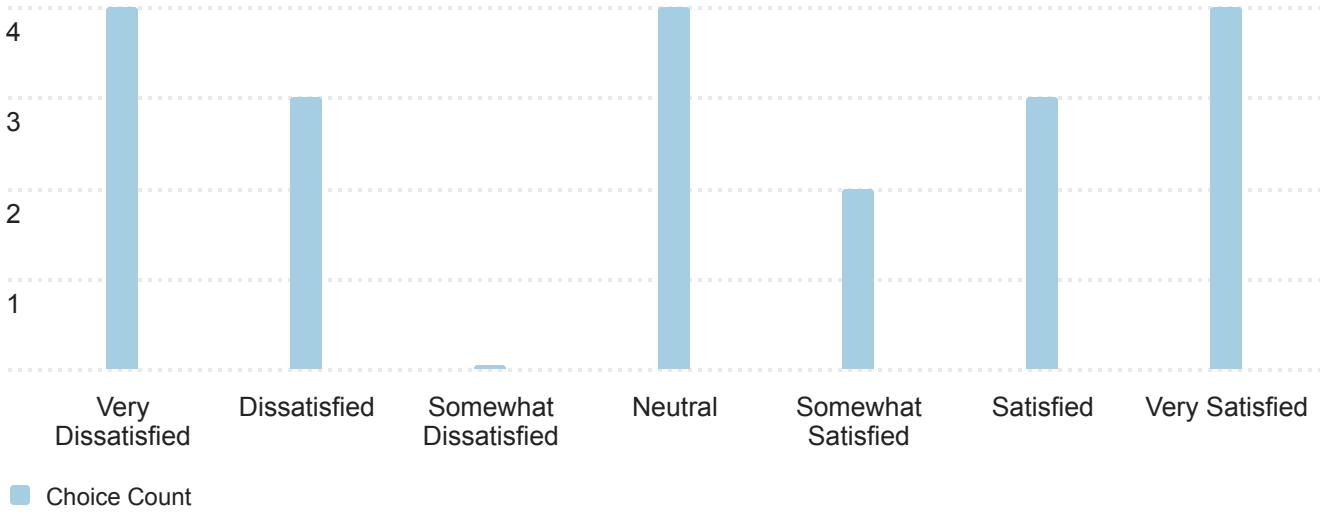
Q13 - 2 - Measurement and feedback of your performance



Q13_3 - Communicates openly and honestly



Q13_4 - Ability to work effectively with you



Q14 - If answering "very dissatisfied/dissatisfied/somewhat dissatisfied" in any of the categories in the question above, please share further information or suggestions for improvement.

The denigrating, repetitive emails I would receive created a horrible work environment.

Joe was not clear on communication to me- I would not know if Joe was on-campus or out of office for the days - so if I needed something, I may find out at that time he is on vacation. He would appear to give reassurance but then there would be no follow through on additional support, getting resources, or giving updates. Joe would be consistently late to 1:1 meetings or any SAS meeting- then he typically would have to leave early to get to another meeting. This felt as though SAS was not a priority. He would consistently tell me to "figure it out" and "get creative" when I would bring issues to him and all of the solutions I had already tried- especially when it came to the workload and staffing. I would request supplies- they never came or it would be months later as I kept reminding him about the tasks he needed to do for SAS.

I have told my supervisor when I did my interview, then applied to the finance position that I want to learn everything at the Dental School so I can prepare for our future outside of the school. She did not listen, in fact she told my coworker that "I wish Tristan was staying. I didn't know she wanted to learn finance, I could have taught her that" when on October 16th I emailed her "Good morning Tina,I just wanted to let you know that I applied for the finance position. During my initial interview with you, Marjel, Beth, and Lori, I talked about how working here will benefit our family in the future to open our own practice and wanting to learn all the parts of working in a Dental Office. I feel like I have a pretty good understanding of how the front side of the Dental clinic world works, and now it's time (if I get the job) to learn the finance/insurance side of Dentistry. I love working with patients and students and I fully plan to stay here I just wanted to give you a heads up. Best, Tristan Bassett" She replied saying "thanks for the heads up but Lori already talked with me".

The only time she would say anything was going over the goals at the end of the year. And it was always a little feedback.

Tina shuts down any idea that you may have without considering it. She says that she is open to ideas, but in reality she isn't there have been multiple instances when she is at the front desk, we are talking about things and how to better them, and she will yell at us and shut any ideas down. I couldn't tell you a time where she was being honest in all honesty.

We worked great until Dr. Franco left, then Marjel and Tina did a complete 180. Tina didn't come out and talk with us for over three months when she is our supervisor, and has no idea how to do any of the scheduling for the dental school. She brags that she is our "higher up" and better than us.

I have had a great relationship with my primary manager over the last 3.5 years as I have served as the first person they have ever managed. However, I began stating that I had a desire for additional challenges back in June 2024. After repeated attempts to expand current roles and explore new opportunities, nothing came to fruition. Ultimately, my main reason for leaving Creighton was the inability to feel challenged and seen by upper management.

My direct supervisor and I were unfortunately unable to get along and work peacefully together. It felt like I was unable to make a mistake, and if I did, then I got in trouble with a condescending tone/attitude, which then made me feel stupid. Additionally, my supervisor micromanaged me to the point of telling me I should not be using sticky notes to keep track of my to-do lists and other items, but instead only use One Note. There was also a lack of appreciation for all the hard work and little extra things I did around the office to make it more efficient and enjoyable for all. Lastly, there were many times my direct supervisor was unprofessional in her behaviors, such as rolling her eyes or giving me "the hand" while I was talking.

Two years ago, my office underwent a change in leadership. Under this new director/supervisor the work environment shifted in directions with which I am no longer comfortable being associated.

Make time to follow through with performance meetings even if there are major holidays to work around. Instead of having a 60 day performance feedback meeting in December, it was suggested to reschedule mid-January and to also include a 60 and 90 day feedback together. This puts me behind because I do not know my progress from the 60 day performance and sets me up for failure with a 90 day performance because my 90 day goals were not discussed. I know the document is internal to the department and is not connected with HR, but this is crucial to keep an employee on track and I hope it is done better for employees in the future.

My original manager, Julie Nelson, was AMAZING. She knew what I wanted for my future, provided great feedback and next steps, communicated openly and effectively, and was readily available when I needed her.

My current manager, Stef Keator, has been in her position since the end of August, and has not met with me one-on-one to go over my career goals or provide feedback of my performance (unless I have requested a meeting regarding being used to train new people). She does not respond to messages until days (sometimes weeks) later and is not available when needed via text, Teams, or email.

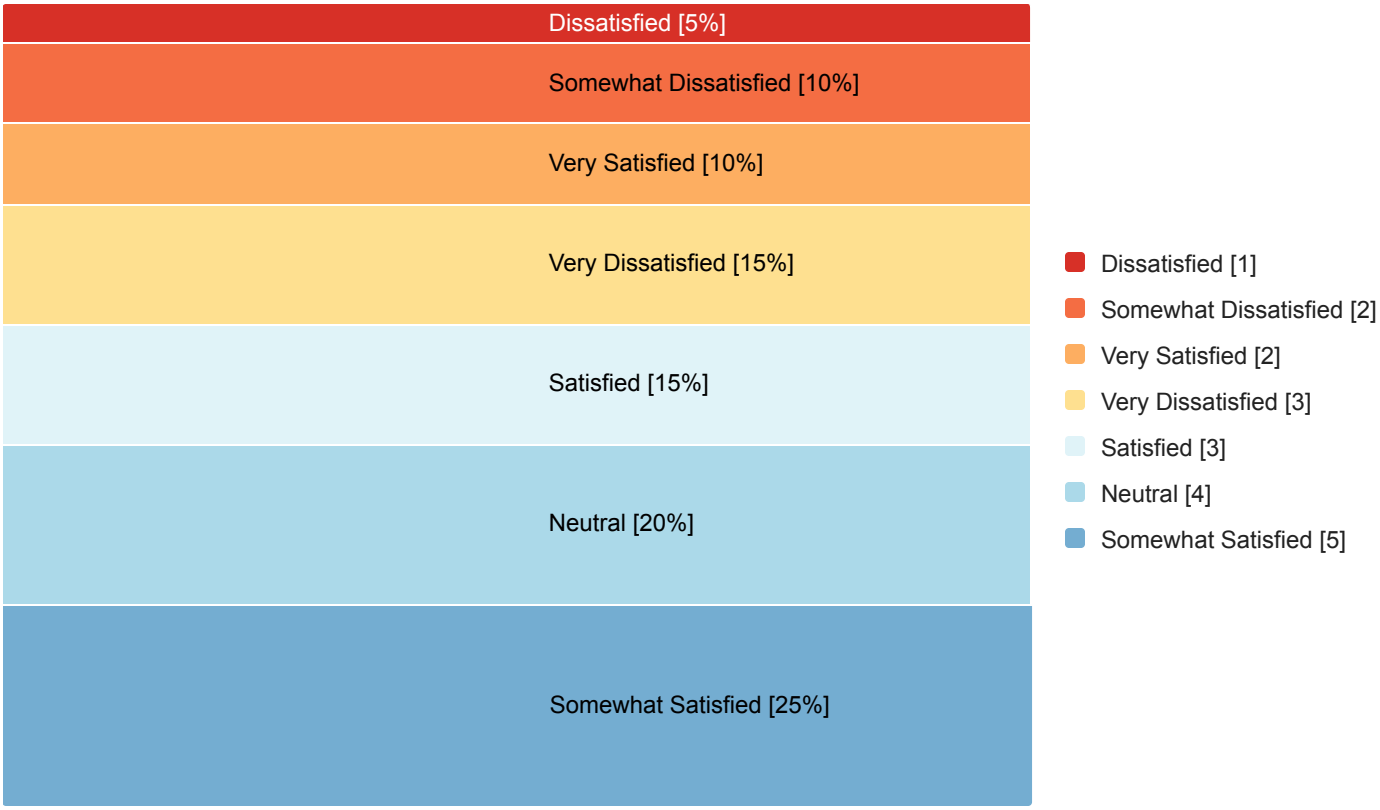
During my time at Creighton my boss in SAS was very rude and created a very hostile work environment. I went to Joe Ecklund in July 2024 to let him know of the situation, and nothing was ever done.

During my time in SAS our director lacked communication. There were several times that she would not inform us on things that were occurring in the department and there were also times she would over share and or gossip about what was going on in the leadership team.

Many times, my boss will ignore phone calls if she does not recognize the phone number. The only time she picks up her office phone is her boss, legal counsel, and or Deans and or Assistant Deans she is trying to get a hold of. She will screen her phone calls and then forward them to me to deal with the conversations of students/parents she doesn't want to deal with.

I have a multiple page document that states all the time my boss has arrived late to work or left early, and she leaves me in charge.

Q15 - Rate your salary and pay (bonuses, raises, shift pay, etc)



Q16 - If answering "very dissatisfied/dissatisfied/somewhat dissatisfied" in any of the categories in the question above, please share further information or suggestions for improvement.

It was low, but as expected for a dental school.

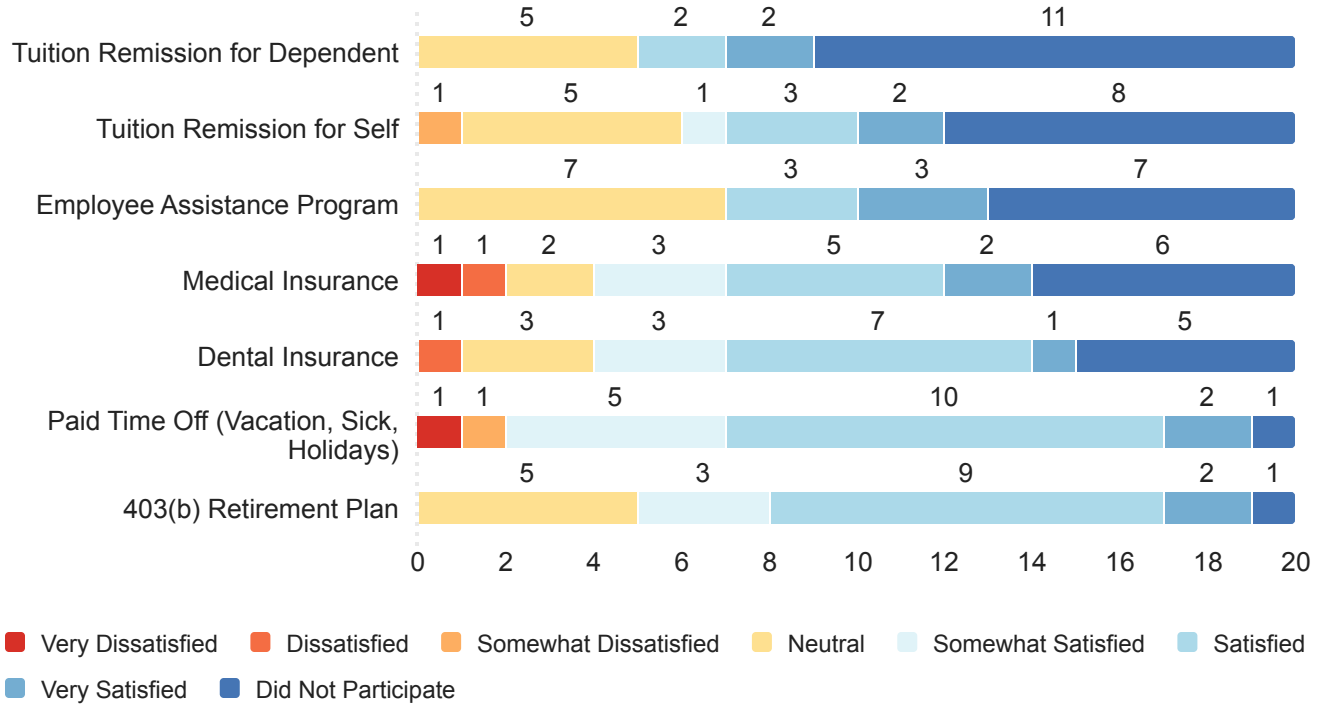
My salary is not comparable to the job market of related jobs in the field outside of higher education. I took a pay cut as a teacher to come here and I am going back to teaching to get paid a significant amount of money more. The only raise mentioned was 3% at the end of my first year which would not even reflect inflation of the cost of goods.

Any other job in the dental field would pay more than $20 starting off. Raises are more than $.50. The Dental school brings in a lot of money, and new hired employees are getting more than existing employees. Or someone does less than you but gets paid way more. Also, If you are fluent in a language, and expect you to use it, and depend on you, you should be getting more.

After receiving my Master’s degree in May 2024, I was under the assumption that some form of a compensation change would occur. This did not take place.

I was not dissatisfied with my pay when I was originally hired and the position and duties I was originally hired for. However, since Julie's departure, I have taken on the responsibilities and duties she held as our Program Manager and I was not paid for that increase in responsibilities and duties.

Q17 - Please rate your benefits:



Q18 - Are there other incentives that the University should consider offering beyond the current benefit package or other suggestions for changes to the existing benefits offered? If so, please list them.

-I was told I am not allowed to take sick time without my chair's approval.
- That my chair has the right to tell me to move a doctor's appointment. Which is against the law.
-That I have to disclose what doctor I saw to HR to take a sick day. Also, against the law.

outside of Creighton gym membership options

None that I can think of Actually do 2 weeks off for Christmas break. This past year it would have been perfectly two weeks, but they didn't do it. Or if not don't tell new hires that Christmas break is two weeks.

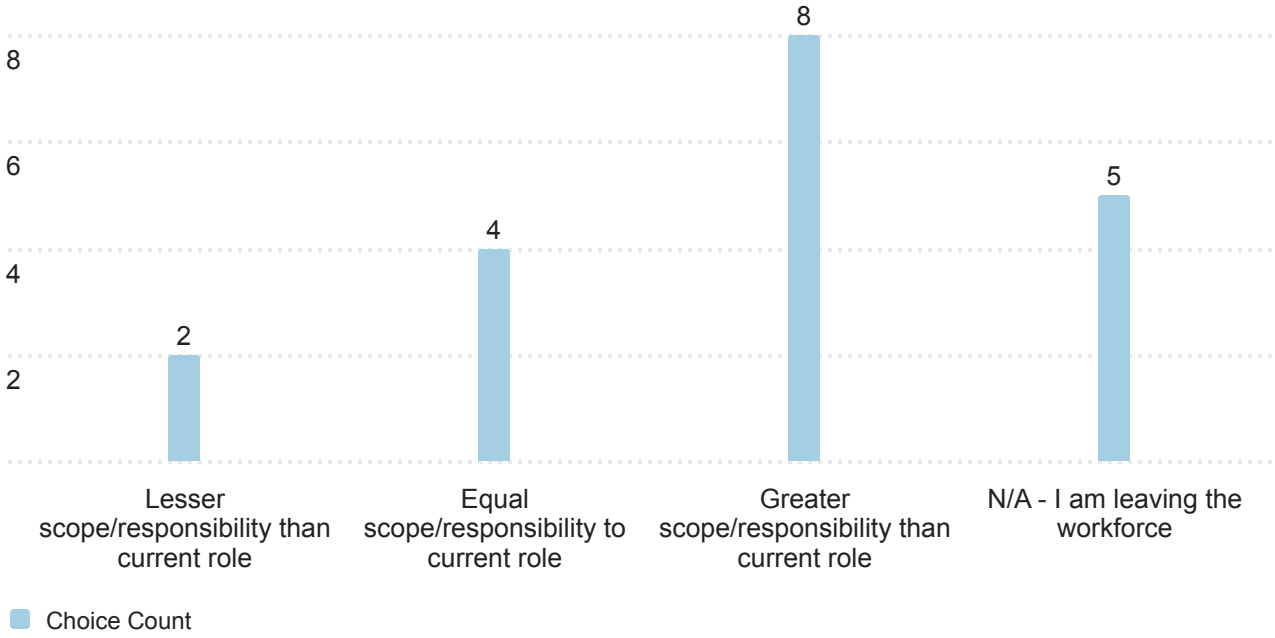
N/A

More hours accrued each month for vacation would be nice.

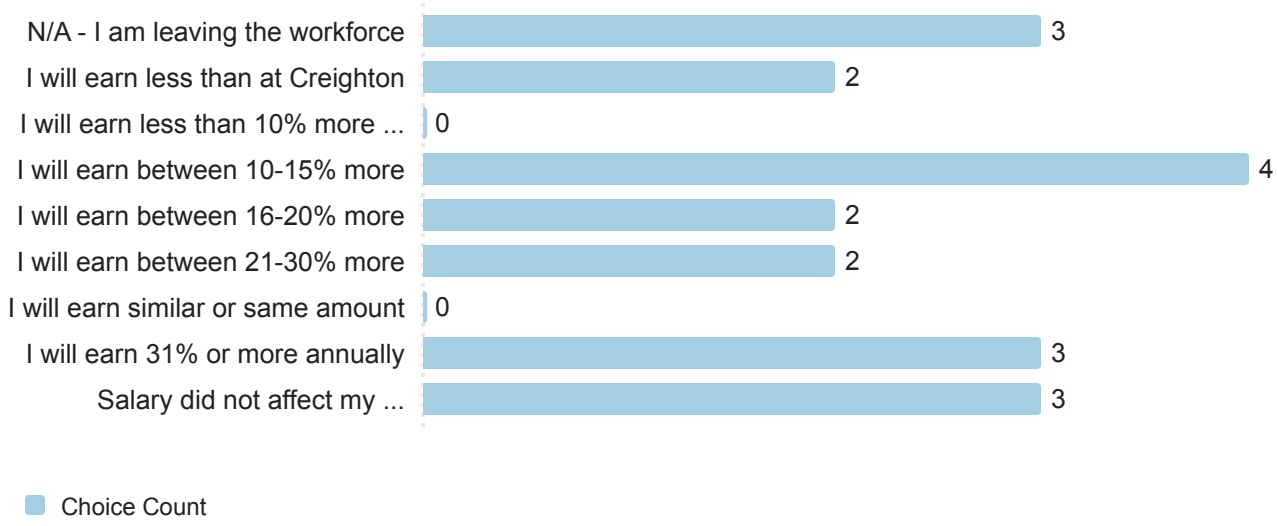
The medical insurance that is provided is not the best. In my previous position I only paid $30 for individual insurance a month. I had a $35,000 back surgery unexpected and only had to pay $250 on my old insurance.

Here at Creighton, I had to pay almost $200 a month for insurance. I also don't appreciate how in order to get birth control I had to get it through Express Scripts. Not all employees who work here are Catholic. Also, for the fact for maternity leave that I have to work here for a year in order to qualify for this benefit is terrible. If you are promoting "family" as an institution, then why do I have to work here for a year to qualify for this benefit. Also, for the fact that it is only 6 weeks off is very minimal. I am heading to another position, and all benefits start on day 1 and I automatically receive 8 weeks paid maternity leave for natural birth or 10 weeks paid for c-section.

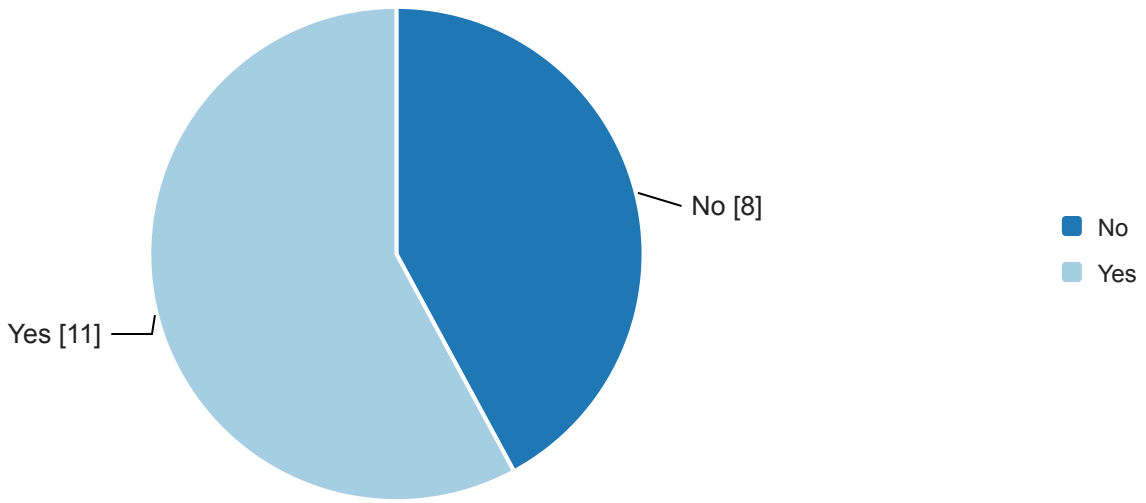
Q19 - The position you are leaving Creighton for is:



Q20 - How does your new salary compare with your salary at Creighton:



Q21 - Would you recommend Creighton as a good place to work?



Q22 - What was your favorite part about working here?

I enjoyed working with my team and educating students of safety

Meeting some nice people.

The students.

Working with the work study students in the office- finding a sense of belonging with the other Directors in the Division after having open conversations, and doing the compliance based work for supporting students with disabilities.

The culture of the department in HAS and working with my colleagues.

Working with my student workers and the positive interactions with students.

Working with great people and great student athletes.

Honestly the students and Tess. They are the only reason that I stayed here for as long as I did. The students depended on me because I understood what they are going through and I wanted to help take some of their weight off their shoulders.

I also loved when I first started it was my first job ever that I was happy in a workplace, never felt like I had to defend myself and I was completely honest and knew that I wouldn't be judged.

I had the opportunity to work with an incredible group of individuals who truly care about the work they do and bettering Creighton's standing in the community. It has been an honor to work here over the past 3.5 years and I will truly cherish my time spend has been an employee and student.

University Relations is something special and I can confidently say I will miss each person I had the pleasure to work with.

The caring and professional staff. Creighton truly is a family to those who work and study here.

The other people! I truly love the culture at Creighton, the values and morals, and the history. I felt so happy to be a part of a place that encouraged spiritual discussion and formation. And the other people in UCOM have become some of my closest friends, even in such a short time!

During my 20 years at Creighton the majority of the people I met and worked with were good people with whom I enjoyed interacting. I feel proud of helping to start a new departmental office from the ground up.

I enjoyed the involvement of the campus.
I am a Veteran and enjoyed the free lunch on Veterans Day.
I was delighted that the entire time I was here I did not have to pay for a parking permit due to the continuance of IT issues.
IT was a quick phone call away on helping me make a ticket, they usually fixed my issue immediately or within an hour and that was truly amazing.
I loved the free tickets that were given to most faculty as long as they were registered. I loved going to the ballet that was held in December.

I appreciate the relationships built with colleagues and other Creighton staff.

The Internal Medicine program - the faculty, staff, and residents within that program are GREAT!

I have met some good people in other departments.

Q23 - Has Creighton exemplified a caring, inclusive, and diverse culture? If not, in what ways could we improve? - Selected Choice sensitivity training for management.

---Q23 - If not, in what ways could we improve?

I am alumni of the dental school, and after working as faculty, am confident they will never change the culture.

It was communicated numerous times that some "do not loose sleep over loosing staff" even after staff have made it known that it is a hard, long process that takes time and energy while trying to manage the day to day and that we do loose sleep over it and why staff won't stay in the division. There is an essential component that we are an in-person division with VERY limited flexibility because we are student facing- if someone would want to work from home or have an appointment in SAS, it was at the expensive of another staff member as one professional staff had to be in the office at all times due to testing integrity- there was a lack of assistance from leadership to assist with coverage- they would offer but would not follow through. The tone of the division was students are first and do whatever for them- not putting selves or family first. Creighton has a lack of diversity and representation of students to staff and faculty - there is a lack of understanding around campus of accessibility and ADA/504 as a campus wide concern and requirement, not only from SAS. There should be more training and examining leadership and ways to hold people accountable.

I appreciated learning the Jesuit philosophy and relating it to my work and personal life.

There is little to no diversity in the university, especially compared to the public schools that I have worked at. Faculty have given pushback on accommodations which to me does not show an inclusive nature toward students. A lot of the staff and faculty care about students and I have had good interactions with people, but it is not a diverse or inclusive campus.

I'm in essence a single parent (I have two kids and my husband is a dental student and is always at the school) I was told from the beginning that they understand that its really just me right now, and that they understand if the girls get sick and I have to call out. I thought dang. This is a caring place until it wasn't ok. I was going through life altering health diagnoses, the kids kept getting sick, and my husband couldn't watch the kids cause he was in his busiest year of dental school.

We may be diverse, but there are cliques. and if you're not part of them, then they treat you horribly.

Honestly If I had 4 people leave in the past 3 months, I would look internally and get to the bottom of things. No one deserves to work in a toxic, narcissistic place.

Before coming to work for Creighton, I unfortunately worked in a very challenging work place environment. One could even argue that it was very toxic. Coming to Creighton was like a breath of fresh air and it’s clear that people truly care about each other. That’s something that most people are unable to find. Creighton is what it is because of the people who call this place home. Continue to emphasize the importance of that.

While everyone else I came into contact with exemplified this culture, but unfortunately my direct supervisor did not demonstrate these values.

Overall, yes.

Within the Internal Medicine program - YES. Within GME - no. Again, I really hope that HR will look into the GME program more based off of my answers.

No Creighton has not demonstrated this to me during my time here. Examples of this include the following:

The hiring process needs improvement. For example, in June 2022 I was first offered a first-round interview for the Director of the Center for Advising Resources and Support (CARS). I sailed through the first interview and was going to be in the Omaha area. I was asked by Joe Ecklund to meet for coffee at Zen. I met him there and after that meeting, he called me to tell me there was an Assistant Director position opening in CARS that they felt I would be a better fit. I asked if I applied for that position if I am still in the running for the Director position and he said yes. I came to campus informed that I was interviewing for both the Director and the Assistant Director role. HOWEVER, this was a total lie, it was only for the Assistant Director job. After I received the Assistant Director job in CARS, I found out on campus by some faculty that some of the search committee said I was too young for the Director position, which is discrimination/ageism, and I was forced into the Assistant Director role. The Assistant Director role in CARS was over sold to me and I was WAY overqualified for this position.

In September 2023 I decided to apply for the SAS position. I had to meet with Joe Ecklund to inform him I would be submitting my application. I had a 45-minute conversation with him trying to convince me I couldn't do the SAS position, and I was not qualified. I received the position and exceled.

The culture in Student Success Division is the leadership does not care. I was informed by Wayne Young that we should be working 55–60-hour weeks. This does not show a caring culture. I am expecting, and I was told by leadership that I move too fast and should not be having a kid, this is not their business and our personal choice. I was also informed by Wayne Young during the week of finals how my husband should not take a week off of work to assist as he won't be helping anyway. Again, these are personal preferences and does not show a supportive caring culture. When I got married in June no one in our division congregated me and multiple times they have said my married name wrong even after I corrected them.

I got engaged in December 2023 and married in June 2024. I took off 9 days total for my wedding/honeymoon. When I returned my boss, Anne Heimann held it over my head for months about how I was gone for 9 days and how her vacation was denied as she wanted to take it the same time I was gone. (I had mine submitted well in advance.) I also don't think I should be treated unfairly for taking time off that I earned.

Q24 - Please list any additional comments about your job and/or Creighton that you feel we should know. In what ways could we improve?

Please list any additional comments about your job and/or Creighton that you feel we should know. In what ways could we improve?

Coming back as faculty was a comparably worse experience than being a student ever was.

I was denied at least 2 vacation requests- one was due to the lack of SAS staff as I was the only SAS staff during the time period, and one was due to the fact I was traveling for work (on-boarding PHX Assist. Director and presenting at a professional conference) and I was already out of the office "not working" for too long during the month- I asked to extend one trip by 2 days to visit family. Compliance and support for student accommodations is a LARGE risk area that needs to be examined closer- Association of Higher Education and Disability (AHEAD) has guidance on staffing levels and the ability to have an audit completed with suggestions. There needs to be an actual working group for accessibility and accommodations on campus through the Presidential Committee - there are new digital accessibility guidelines that will impact Creighton and there is a lack of understanding or direction of these guidelines, the intraweb was creating and was inaccessible - prior to launching it had to be fixed, and faculty are creating inaccessible content for students.

Offer more chances for internal advancement.

My name is Maddie Parker, and I work in Student Accessibility Services that is under Student Success.
Feel free to reach out with any questions or concerns regarding my exit survey! My cell is 402-203-4471 and my extension is 2145. Thanks!

During this past winter break, Marjel and Tina were forcing us to use sick/vacation/volunteer hours to not come to work on 12/23 and the Friday before that, then 1/2-3-25. If you didn't have any time off then you had to stay at home and not get paid. You didn't have the option to work even when Creighton said that it wasn't in the winter break. We let Dean Wallen know. She was not ok with that and talked with Marjel, we were able to work those days, but as retaliation I was tasked with calling over 200 patients to confirm their appointments on 1/6/25 by myself, when I had enough work to last me two days and Marjel and Tina knew. I did not call patients. We have a confirmation service that the school pays for that.
Also going into a meeting with a supervisor where you want to be heard and understood to then be there for an hour and leave not even being able to talk more than 5 minutes to try to be heard. I have more instances of how toxic this place has been, but it's not worth my time.

My only piece of feedback is to strive to provide more opportunities for further growth especially for your younger employees.

Everyone in the office knows the reason I am leaving is because of my direct supervisor. Everyone also knows how unkind and unprofessional she can be, yet no one says anything about it because she is a VP and they believe nothing will be done about it.

I saw many interesting seminars I would have loved to attend but they lasted the whole day. Maybe Creighton could start incorporating a 30-60 minute lunch and learn at a general part of the lunch hour so faculty could get a sense of the seminar and attend too?

Please see above answers.

During my time at Creighton my boss in SAS was very rude and created a hostile work environment. I went to Joe Ecklund in July to let him know of the situations, and nothing was ever done.

My boss Anne Heimann will also cover up mistakes she makes and want our department to lie about them. For example, in November 2023 Anne stated how she would open the testing center after Thanksgiving. We had a tester at 7:30 AM so the SAS staff member needed to be here at 7:00 AM to open. That day Nicolle and I arrived and there was an email in the SAS inbox that the student was here and no staff member was here. Anne was aware of this and had Nicolle email the student stating it was a Clockwork error (our internal software system) that didn't show the student's information. This is not accurate as it showed the time the student booked. Anne then laughed it off and said to Nicolle that if she ever did that Anne would write Nicolle up for not being on time to proctor an exam.

Another example is Anne has stated several times our hours for working in SAS are the following: Assistant Director is 7:00 am to 3:00 PM, Associate Director 8:15 AM to 4:15 PM, and Director 8:30-4:30/5:00 PM. (We do the adjusted hours as we only take a 15–20-minute lunch break as we have to staff the testing center all year.) Anne never shows to work on time. She will arrive at 9:00 AM and then sometimes will leave at 2:30/3:00 PM. I, as the Associate Director am usually stuck staying to cover the testing center until 4:30-5:00 PM. Anne will also claim how she will work 13-hour days in SAS. This is not accurate as during finals in December 2023 she didn't even help prep the Sunday before and then showed up to work at 7:00 AM Monday morning. Maddie (Assistant Director) and I worked for 2 hours the Sunday before finals and then were here at 6:00 PM for prepping. Anne claims on her calendar that she was here at 6:20 AM, which is not accurate. (There are several examples of this.)

Multiple times during the workday if you go to Anne Heimann's office to ask her a question she will be watching Netflix and or avoiding her tasks. She will talk about how she doesn't want to work or do things and either leave, be watching Netflix, or shopping online.

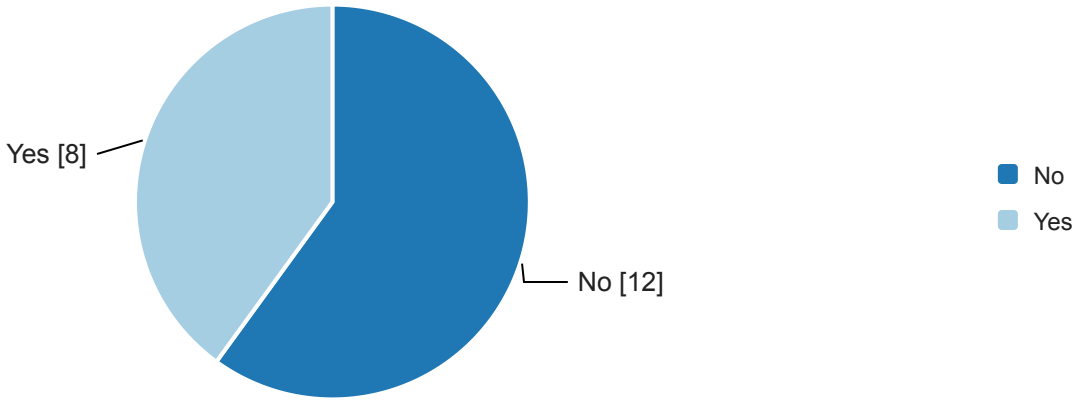
Anne Heimann went to AZ to train Matthew Brody our Assistant Director. During that time, she told Matt and me that if leadership such as Wayne or Joe ask about Matt's training it went well, and Matt got his computer on Monday the very first day. This is also a lie as Anne didn't put the request in for Matt's computer and it didn't show up until 2 hours before Anne had to fly back to Omaha. Anne barely trained Matt during his time. Once Matt had his computer Matt had to shadow me virtually, and I had to train him on Clockwork. I also trained Maddie Parker the Assistant Director that was hired in July at the Omaha campus as well.

During my hiring process in SAS, I was not informed that my position for the salary was out of the Academic Success Office. I was informed this after I was hired and then informed on additional tasks I needed to do regarding retention. However, working in SAS there is no time for retention projects, multiple times I would hear from Leadership that if I was not starting to do retention projects then my job would be pulled, and I would be placed in the Academic Success Office which is where my salary line is from. After the SAS Office went through being audited Wayne Young informed me, Anne Heimann, and Joe Ecklund that my job should only be out of SAS and not retention. It took them over a year to figure this out.

Anytime I was out of the office Anne Heimann would not cover for me. For example, we have the SAS inbox, she would not respond to emails and let it pile up and I would have to deal with it when I returned. However, if the Assistant Director was out of the office and couldn't open the testing center I would have to come in and cover for her and or if Anne was out of the office, I was told I had to cover for her. How is this fair that if I am out sick and or taking a vacation day that no one is covering for me?

Last year in January the University was closed due to weather. Even though it was closed I was still told by my boss that I had to cover a student meeting. I had to meet virtually with Joe Ecklund and a student.

Q25 - Did you see or hear of any activity that caused you concern or that you would consider improper?*



Q26 - Please describe what you observed. If possible, please name anyone who may have information.

Inappropriate jokes by a male doctor to a female student. It was reported to administration, and nothing was done to discipline him.
A doctor joking that a staff member was "special needs" implying she was mentally challenged.
A coworker was intoxicated at work, it was reported and nothing was done.
Patients being allowed back after they say racist, homophobic or sexual comments to the students. They are reported and told to just pass the patient to another student.
Nothing said to management remains confidential. I have been told countless things about other employees that 100% should have been confidential.
Confidence in leadership is lacking among faculty/staff and openly discussed.

I filed a Title IX complaint against my dept. chair that lists details.

The Assist. Vice Provost and Vice Provost would say the expectation is to work 50-55 hours per week, they would always say to think about the optics and "spin" the messaging when someone would leave the division, there was sharing of health information, and they are currently interviewing for a position on campus that has not been approved. One senior leader in SS stated they cannot work with people with emotions and another senior leader agreed with that statement. Senior leadership when directed about privacy and compliance would disagree with me- even after consulting with general council - they would state they talked to general council - would withhold information from SAS but impacted our day to day. When coming up with ways to support SAS in the meantime with staffing changes, legal and title IX said they would step up, but it was determined that help would not be beyond Student Success- even though there is no expert in Student Success for accommodations. The messaging is also Directors are here to make the Vice Provost look good as their only job.

Doing the PNC process on a student a different way that was stated (I was told, it was as follows. File complaint, investigation, Committee of Academic Misconduct) why would they have the student meet with the Committee of Academic Misconduct if he was never guilty. He would have never gone through that if they did the process as stated the first time I filled out a PNC. As well as I only turned it in because Faculty and my supervisor told me to do it because I was lead to believe he did it after I was so spread thin that I couldn't remember even putting it in the schedule one minute after I put it in. I want to make it clear. I did not lie. I honestly did not remember, then was told multiple times from my supervisor to put in that report. I should not have. Saying that I was dishonest is very offensive to me when I strive in all my being to be honest and true to all my acquaintances. It's a huge part of my religion and who I am, and even if I didn't like that student, I wouldn't intentionally try to ruin their life. And then in that meeting feeling like I was purposefully lying to taint his record and ruin his life when that wasn't it. I understand that it wasn't right to make that PNC when it was me who scheduled it, but again, I would never have done it if I remembered that I put it in.

I went into detail with Michele. She is welcome to share all of that information with anyone. But it just included a lot of unprofessional behaviors, such as hurtful and condescending language and body language.

A student who worked in my office made a report to Title IX regarding director/supervisor.

I was requested to come to a community outreach event on Saturday December 7th. While in a church auditorium, my supervisor, Dr. Kosoko-Lasaki asked me if I had children. I said no. She dropped to her knees and began to pray aloud that I would be blessed to have twins. I personally do not want children and before I could ask her to stop, she was finished. It made me feel very uncomfortable. I would suggest that she ask before religiously praying for someone in the future.

When I transitioned from my Assistant Director role (CARS) to SAS I was working extra hours as I was told I had to work in both places until my old position was filled. This went on from October until January. This is not ok to make someone work two different areas. Then in April 2024 when the SAS Assistant Director Nicolle left, I was then working her job and mine from April until August which is when the new hire was finally trained.

It is also not fair that the Leadership Team can work from home in our department, but when we ask to work from home we are told no or that we actually have to be working. My boss Anne Heimann will claim how she is working from home, and we can reach her through Teams. There are several times when I will reach out and she will not respond back for days. But then she has stated to employees in the office how she is going to message us to see if we are working and we always reply.

SAS is a compliance office, and we can't share personal information of students. Anne Heimann provided the wrong contact information to a student. The student reached out to the contact information that was provided, and it was of a parent of another student. Anne swept it under the rug, but the mom was very upset about this and claimed how it is a FERPA violation, which it was.

Anne Heimann created a Teams chat for our SAS office. On the Teams chat we will mention students' names and or questions we have. I asked our Assistant Director Maddie Parker why she was not communicating on there and she said she didn't know anything about this chat. Turns out that Anne Heimann put a student by mistake in the chat so lots of information the student had access to of the concerns our office was talking about. Again, this is a compliance office, and she swept it under the rug again.

This is just a start of things that occurred during my time in SAS. I have 13 pages of documentation of all the situations that occurred. Again, I meet with Joe Ecklund, which is Anne Heimann's boss in July 2024 informing him of the work environment and how it was hostile, but nothing was ever done.
